Taking that extra step or extra time not only helps the deal run smoother, but also brings great satisfaction & joy.

For Ashley Gallagher, connecting with people is second nature. “Ever since I was a kid I’ve had a fascination for people and their stories, always curious about their goals and what I could do to help.”

That empathy has been the cornerstone of Ashley’s professional and personal success.

Prior to joining Radius, Ashley was an investment sales agent with Marcus & Millichap in Ventura County, focusing on the office and industrial market. Earlier in her career she worked for Alliance Residential in Northern California in the sale and management of multifamily assets ranging from 100 to 400 units. Her responsibilities included the supervision of new construction projects from ground up to leasing. Later she would move into a performance manager role for all of the Northwest, training sales associates and business managers to maintain an optimum level of success.

“My goal has always been to improve my client’s position, create a solution or help them start the next chapter. I’ve been blessed to be welcomed into their homes and to have developed lifelong friendships.”

After work, Ashley returns home to Thousand Oaks for her other high-energy job of parenting three vivacious kids with her husband Shane. “They are my greatest accomplishment in life and the reason I strive to be better every day,” she says. “We’re always moving faster than we should, but my family has taught me to slow down and appreciate the NOW and the WHO that are sitting right in front of me.”
